A note from our CEO

ANIL GODHAWALE

Group CEO, Project Controls Institute
A Product of Projcon Group

Dear Stakeholders,

Project Controls is a fast-growing critical discipline. Industry leaders are keen to invest in the best, but given the lack of a skilled, accessible pool of practitioners to teach Project Controls, the industry has been driven to create its own internal training courses. This means that while these courses align with an employer's current needs, they are rarely recognised by external organizations and professional bodies. As highly skilled individuals move between companies, their qualifications lose value.

To encourage the brightest and best young people to take up the challenge of Project Controls, organisations must be able to demonstrate that a career in Project Controls offers the opportunity for long-term, senior-level career growth and transferable expertise in an international workforce.

To address these challenges, I am pleased to introduce you to Project Controls Institute - the world's first and most unique Project Controls learning platform. We offer competency development across the full spectrum of Project Controls, alongside preparing learners for a wide range of global certifications. It is a single, unique framework of streamlined practical courses cleverly designed to capture the key learning elements around knowledge, skills, and behaviors, while meeting multiple regulatory requirements and global accreditations.

I invite you to take some time to review our portfolio of courses and support our journey to professionalize and further advance Project Controls.

Sincerely

Anil Godhawale
